

Project Leadership and Management Skills Simulation Program

Would you like to test your project leaders in their leadership and management skills?

GBMC has developed a highly engaging programme that simulates an environment that tests leaders and their managers in applying the leadership skills that they have been trained in.

The programme is of high energy that runs over 2 days with up to 100 participants that includes project managers their team members and project sponsors.

Programme Context

Project Management is both an art and a science. It is a science because project managers need to plan, estimate budgets, draw up schedules, manage costs and deliver quality results in line with the agreed milestones in a complex and constantly changing environment and within a strict financial framework. It is an art because they have to ensure that the team gets along well and that the extra elements that contribute to the success of the project are achieved through efficiencies and synergies. Project teams have also to communicate with different stakeholders including their superiors, support functions, clients, suppliers, colleagues, and members of other project teams with whom their team is interacting.

In this context, it is very important for project managers to have good soft skills such as communication, the ability to influence, motivate people and handle conflictual situations.

It is equally important that Project Managers develop their ability to anticipate potential problems and as the extent to which they are equipped to overcome them in order to avoid traps when they appear. To be successful they need to better consider the measures for success, such as satisfying the requirements of stakeholders, delivering value, and meeting time and budget expectations.

The purpose of this training is to provide Project Managers, Team Leaders, Team Members, Project Sponsors with an opportunity to review, develop, improve and practice the soft skills they and the organisation needs in order to optimize resources, anticipate and better handle the constraints with which project teams are expected to work in. A strong sense of leadership and commitment will enhance the credibility of the project teams in their organization.
